What is the Media Library?

The Media Library, within the Milan campus Library, is an innovative facility that supports academic activities, research and information.

It consists of specially equipped workstations where it is possible to consult specialized on-line databases for Communication and Performing Arts studies and access a vast archive of videos, all encoded by internationally-recognized standards.

A research community has been developed around this place with the aim to promote audiovisual creativity through the use of high quality content, interaction and interdisciplinary studies.

The Media Library is specialized in seven main subjects:

Following the agreement between Rai Teche and Università Cattolica, it is also possible to use in the Media Library, through special workstations and by appointment, the Rai multimedia archive: a heritage made up of 75 million indexed documents on the history of Italian television and radio - and more - from their origins to the present day, available to students, professors and researchers.

For educational purposes, it is possible to get support to create video clips for lectures or for enriching theses and research papers, taking advantage of the Library's entire multimedia collection. Students can also make purchase proposals and receive a personalized, subject-specific, reference service.

The multimedia workstations, located inside the Central Library hall, are available to all the students and the academic staff of Università Cattolica.
